

WEEK WITHOUT DRIVING

September 29-October 5, 2025

Did You Know?

Nearly one-third of people in the U.S. cannot drive due to age, ability, financial constraints & other barriers. Yet, our transportation systems & communities are still designed around driving.

What's Happening?

The Week Without Driving is an annual, nationwide initiative designed to give decision makers & individuals an opportunity to set aside their car keys for a week to see what life is like for those who cannot drive. By taking other forms of transportation, participants experience both the limitations & benefits of traveling without driving.

Can I participate?

Anyone can participate, whether you're an community member, elected leader, public sector employee or professional. You can travel however you'd like, but avoid driving yourself. Remember, this is not a disability simulation & driving does not signify failure. The goal is to understand how nondrivers navigate their daily travel & what choices they might face.

September 29-October 5, 2025

This year, I commit to participating in Week Without Driving by:

- Signing up and taking part in the Week Without Driving.
- Encouraging an elected official to join by sending them an email or letter.
- Inviting my family, friends and neighbors to participate.
- Posting on social media about my experience to raise awareness and spark conversations.
- Something else:
